Lori's Stories

Welcome to our first issue of Wags Tails.

I want to thank everyone for bringing your dogs to Wags Inn. When I started out dog sitting to support my dog rescue habit I never would have dreamed I would get to watch all of your dogs. And, then I was lucky enough to meet someone to share my dream.

The first time Scott came to my front door he was greeted by 10 of my dogs. He was stunned to say the least. And now, three years later, Scott and I spend hours together with our dogs and all the dogs who stay with us. He has even been known to stop and bring a few strays home...

Most of you already know Tiffany Kuivinen. We searched to find someone to care for our dogs. Tiffany has been a blessing for all of us. She is a part of what makes Wags Inn "your dogs home away from home".

Ashley Kuivinen will be working here during her breaks from school. The dogs are always so thrilled to see her. She is a natural like her sister.

Scott and I look forward to a great Spring and Summer. Let us know whatever we can do to make your dog's visit more comfortable while staying at our home.

Sincerely, Lori

Congratulations
It's a girl!

Food for Thought

Do I look fat in this collar????

Approximately 25% of dogs are overweight. Obesity in dogs can cause medical problems for the cardiovascular, respiratory and skeletal system.

Ways to see if your dog is overweight:

Rib Check: Place both of your thumbs on your dog's backbone and spread both hands across his rib cage. On an obese dog, you won't be able to feel the ribs through the fat covering, or will only be able to feel them when you exert significant pressure. Actually feeling your dog is important, as the coat of many dogs will make a visual check difficult.

Profile Check: Examine your dog's profile – it's best if you are level with the dog. In an obese dog, the stomach will hang down and there will be no abdominal tuck behind the rib cage.

Overhead Check: Looking at your dog from overhead, see if you can see a waist behind the ribs.

An overweight dog will not have a discernible waist.

Ways to avoid obesity:

- Limit treats. Turn one biscuit into 3 treats. Avoid table scraps.
- Exercise your dog. Just like people they need to burn more calories than they take in.
- Measure their food.

A healthy dog is a happy dog!!!
